and I laughed, coughed your name, closed my eyes and saw sparks filling the sky at the back of my eyes -

I saw the sky raise its itching back, howling. and on Headington Hill, we spat our names in wintergreen, in little dots of light, in welts, midnight fog and filled our lungs with bonfires.

That means we've got to all pitch in for this year's firework party Looks like it's cut price Happy Shopper roman candles. Our bonfire's only twigs and leaves; whatever we can scavenge,

'Cos the price of timber's way beyond our purse. The sparklers that we've found are dim to say the very least Could the outlook for the 5th be any worse?

How Guy Fawkes tried to raze parliament to the ground, Perhaps we ought to take a different tack with things this year And raise the spirit of the country all around.

Like a beacon, to express our hate and rage For those selfish souls who lined their nests with money that was stripped From the public purse and working people's wage.

Old munitions make great rockets, putting fireworks in the shade And a first strike on the Square Mile equals glee!

Let us hear the politicians' sorry squawks. Let fire rain down on Parliament and burn it to the ground, Let us raise our glasses to the hero Fawkes.

Congratulations to the winners of our fireworks poetry

ON HEADINGTON HILL I drank gunpowder tea. My tongue curled in on itself

Dave and George have blamed their cuts on Labour's gaffes and errors: The council budget's slashed by fiscal vandals.

Considering that Bonfire Night is there to help remember

Let the skies light up with fireworks to express our righteous ire,

A bonfire made of bankers' bonuses and fat cat pay would blaze As Ark Royal hits the scrap heap and the forces lose resources They could make a contribution to our spree.
