MARY POTTER'S OXFORD: ZULEIKA DOBSON

Sir Max Beerbohm (1872-1956) was one of the most renowned authors, caricaturists and parodists of his day. Zuleika Dobson, his first full-length novel, was received with great enthusiasm, and remains one of the most enduringly popular of all Oxford stories: not only for its keen satire and memorable one liners, but also for its charmingly lyrical evocation of Edwardian Undergraduate life. The novelist E. M. Forster described it as "a great work - the most consistent achievement of fantasy of our time . . . . so funny and charming, so iridescent yet so profound."

Originally published in 1911, the story concerns the visit to Oxford of Zuleika Dobson, a femme fatale of such astounding beauty that the stone heads surrounding the Sheldonian break into a sweat as she passes. It is Eights week, and the heroine has come to stay with her Grandfather, the warden of the privileged, all-male domain of Judas College. Unsurprisingly, the tweed and flannel clad undergraduates all fall hopelessly in love with her, including the rich and gifted Duke of Dorset. But Zuleika, a conjuror by trade, is only able to love a man who shows himself to be impervious to her charms. This restriction proves fatal: one by one her suitors, made desperate by rejection, commit suicide, until finally, on the final day of the bumping races, a vast crowd of undergraduates hurl themselves into the list, crying her name as they sink beneath the water. Their sacrifice does affect our heroine, but not perhaps as one might expect. That very evenings he assk her maid to consult Bradshaw (the railway timetable). "See if it is possible to go direct from here to Cambridge," she says.
